

Because porn hurts kids.

Culture Reframed is the premier science-based, global organization addressing the emotional, behavioral, and sexual impact of pornography on youth. The non-profit was founded by Dr. Gail Dines, one of the world’s leading experts on the harms of pornography.

The Pornography Public Health Crisis

With ease of access to free, violent pornography online, it has become the world’s de facto sex education for youth. Early exposure can significantly affect mental health and development by normalizing sexual violence during a critical time when youth are forming their sexual templates and identities.

How We Achieve Our Mission

By operating with a public health approach, Culture Reframed provides resources for professional groups, governments, parents and caregivers, medical and educational professionals, and child advocates by:

-  Raising awareness and shifting cultural narratives about the impact of pornography
-  Building resilience and resistance in young people to hypersexualized media and pornography
-  Advancing academic research on the harms of pornography
-  Fostering institutional change to improve the protection and safeguarding of young people
-  Advocating for policy change

Examples of Our Free Science-Based Resources

- Online Courses for Parents of Teens & Parents of Tweens
- Porn-Critical Sex-Education Curriculum
- Training Materials for Children’s Advocacy Centers

Find these resources in the “Courses” section of our website, CultureReframed.org.

1 in 3

young people say they’ve seen pornography by age 12

Join our online community to receive updates on our work, events, and the latest news related to the harms of pornography on youth.

@CultureReframed